Reading and Discussion

It is difficult to describe a typical family nowadays. Depending on the country and the culture, families can range from a large extended group of relatives living together in one home to a single parent family with only one child. While large extended families were once common in North America and many western countries, nowadays, it is unusual for grandparents, uncles, aunts, and cousins to all live together in one home.

In Canada and United States, children are encouraged to be independent. Many young adults live by themselves or with roommates while going to university and most move out of the family home permanently when they have completed their education. They choose their own careers and their own spouses. Arranged marriages are not part of the western culture. Most young married couples choose to live apart from their parents and many even end up living in different cities.

Western society also emphasizes the independence of the elderly. When senior citizens become too old to live independently, they often move into special care facilities or nursing homes. People from other cultures may find this aspect of western society very strange because in their cultures they are used to caring for their elderly parents in their own homes.

Another major change in the structure of the family results from the increase in divorce and remarriage in our modern society. Nowadays, blended families are becoming more and more common. Many households now include stepparents, stepbrothers and sisters, and half-brothers and sisters. The number of single parent homes is also increasing rapidly.

Questions For Discussion

1. How is family life here different from family life in your country?
2. At what age do children usually leave home?
3. Do young adults often live with roommates when they leave home?
4. Do married couples often live with their parents?
5. Are arranged marriages common in your country?
6. Are there many single parent families in your country?
7. What is the rate of divorce in your country?
8. If parents are divorced in your country, who usually gets custody of the children?
9. Do you think joint custody is a good idea?
10. Who looks after elderly parents in your country?
11. What are the advantages and disadvantages of living in a multi-generational family?
12. What are the advantages and disadvantages of being an only child?
13. Do grandparents play an important role in raising grandchildren in your country?
14. Do most married women work outside the home in your country?
15. In your country, do husbands help with the housework and care of the children?

Family - Teacher’s Notes

These activities are designed for low-intermediate level adult ESL learners; however, with some modification, they may also be suitable for upper-beginner through upper-intermediate levels.

Introduction
On the day prior to introducing the theme of Family, ask the students to bring family pictures to class to share with their classmates. Bring pictures of your own and explain the concept of a family tree. Ask a few students to show their pictures to the class and indicate the relationships of the family members.

Vocabulary Development – Family Relationships, Martial Status, etc.
Before distributing the vocabulary sheet on family relationships, try to elicit as much vocabulary as possible from the students by putting a chart on the board with three columns, male, female, and either sex. The students may already be familiar with many of the more common terms. Distribute the illustration of the family tree and the list of family relations and explain the vocabulary. Repeat and monitor pronunciation.

Conversation Practice – Family survey
Break the class into groups of three. In order to practice the vocabulary on family relations, the students will complete the chart provided. Before they begin their group work, ask the class as a whole to make questions for the words provided on the chart. (ex. Are you married? Do you have children? How many children do you have? How old are they? Do you have siblings? Are you the oldest? How old are your siblings? How many nieces / nephews do you have, etc.) Put the questions on the board and practice repeating them. Have the students share their pictures in their groups, encouraging real conversation, while they complete their charts.

Vocabulary Review
Have the students work individually on the worksheet while you circulate and monitor their work. Correct orally with the class as a whole. Have students alternate giving the answers.

Pair Work – Information Gap – Alfred Baker’s Family Tree
Break the class into pairs. Give one student Sheet A and the other B. The object of this exercise is to complete Alfred Baker’s Family Tree. Remind the students that this is an oral exercise. They are not to show their partner their information. They are only allowed to tell them. Encourage them to begin by asking, “What do you know about Alfred’s family? One student may say, “I know that Alfred is a grandfather.” The other may say, “I know that Doris is Alfred’s wife.” (Answer key: Alfred Baker is married to Doris; they have three children, Judy, Rachael and Bobby. Judy is married to David. They have two children, Mary and Andrew. Rachael is married to Bill. They have no children. Bobby is single.) When all the pairs have completed the tree, review together as a class.

Reading and Discussion
Have students take turns reading the passage aloud and monitor pronunciation. Check for comprehension, by asking questions. (ex. What are some different kinds of families described in the passage, What is a blended family, Do most elderly parents in western society live with their children, etc.) Again, divide the class into groups of three or four, trying to mix cultural backgrounds. Have the students discuss the questions in their groups. When the group work is completed, share some of the information with the class as a whole. You can ask one student from each group to report back, or allow a freer forum of discussion.

Language Development – Vocabulary, Idioms and Expressions
Teach the new vocabulary and idioms, using the words in context with numerous examples. Have the students give examples and write sentences of their own.

Group Interaction and Question Formation – “Find Someone Who…”
Distribute the worksheet. Have the students write the questions before they begin the oral practice and review the questions together. This will ensure they are asking the questions correctly as they circulate around the room. Have the students circulate around the class asking the questions on the sheet. When the student finds a classmate who can answer the question, he will then write the student’s name on the line and follow-up with one more question of his/her own. Ex. “Is your maternal grandmother still living?” - If the student answers “yes”, the second question might be: “How old is she?” or “Does she live with you?” Try to encourage the students to engage in real conversation during this activity. Follow up by sharing the information with the whole class. This activity provides a good opportunity for the students to practice the new vocabulary.
